Suggestions About Shopping. Purchasers, should, as far as possible, patronize the merchants of their own town. It is poor policy to send money abroad for articles which can be bought as cheap at home. Do not take hold of a piece of goods which another is examining. Wait until it is raplaced upon the counter before you take it up. Injuring goods when handling, pushing aside other persons, lounging upon the counter, whisperiog. loud talk, and laughing when in a store are all evidences of ill breading. Never attempt to "beat down" prices when shopping. It the prices do not suit, go elsewhere. The just and upright merchant will have but one price for the goods, and he will strictly adhere to it. It is an insult to a clerk or merchant to suggest to a customer that he may buy cheaper or better goods elsewhere. It is also rude to give your opinion, unasked, about the goods that another is purphasing. Never expect a clerk to leave another customer to wait on you; and when attending upon you, do not cause him to wait while you visit with another. When the purchases are made, let them be sent to your home, and thus avoid loading yourself with bundles. Treat clerks, when shopping, respectfully, and give them to more trouble than is necessary. Ask for what is wanted explicitly, and if you wish to make examination with a view to future purchase, say so. Be perfectly frank. There is no necessity for practicing deceit. The rule should be pay for goods when you buy them. If, however, you are trusted by the merchant, you should be very particular to pay your indebted. ness when you agree to. By doing as you promise, you acquire a habit of promptitude, and at the same time establish credit and make reputation among those among whom you deal It is rude in the extreme to find fault and to make sneering remarks about goods To draw unfavorable comparisons between the goods and those found at other stores does no good, and shows wart of deference and respect to those who are waiting upon you Politely state that the goods are not what you want, and, while you may buy, you prefer to look further. If a mistake has been made whereby you have been given more goods than you paid for or have received more change than was you due, go immediately and have the error rectided. You cannot afford to sink your moral character by taking advantage of sury mistake. taking advantage of such mistakes. If you had made an error to your disadvantage, as a merchant you would wish the customer to return and make it right. You should do as you would be done by. Permanent success depends upon your being strictly honest —Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms

A TURTLE AND STURGEON FIGHT. -C. S. S. Horner, while fishing recently in Flint river, Ga., was disturbed by the continual falling of some heavy body in the water. After listen. ing for some time he concluded that something uousual was going on, and, ssizing his gun, went forward to investigate. On the orposite side of the river he saw a white object with a large dark one attacking it. A boat boing handy, he bailed it, and expeditiously and quietly passed over. He struck the bank about twelve feet above the cause of disturbance, seized his gun, and, as the boat swung around with the stream fired at the bead of the dark of ject. He then dropped the gun, and as the boat drifted he lifted an immense logger head turtle into it, after which he pulled in the other object, which proved to be a large sturgeon. Befored he could recross the river, the turtle, which was only stunned by the bird shot, recovered and showed fight. The situation was lively and interesting. The boat was leaky, the water deep and swift, the turtle large, strong and determined on a fight. It advanced with open mouth, and Cui's gun was empty. He gave the boat all the imperus possible, stuck the paddle in the beast's mouth, drew a little penkaife from his pocket and tried to cut its throat. As the turtle kept its hold on the paddle, he succeeded in this after several efforts. He then carried his pr zo home, and found that it weighed fifty or sixty pounds. The sturgeon

he supposed weighed thirty or foriy. SOLID COMFORTS .- For the best COOKING STOVES, FIRE PLACE HEATERS, OFFICE STOVES, RANGES, FURNAGES and STOVE
